Whispers from The Brighter World

Tuesday, June 4, 2002 - 8:00 a.m.

The only and true recourse for human beings is God. The only certainty for them lies in this spiritual dimension, unalterable over time. On Earth, everything changes, evolves and transforms. God, for His part, doesn't change; He is there, immutable and serene, listening to people who are willing to turn to Him and regard Him as such. In His greatness and goodness, He listens to them all, whether they are aware of His reality or not.

Human beings are fortunate in that they aren't just dust, incapable of resisting the influence of time. Their lives endure beyond this body of flesh, so fragile and destructible. Their true identity lies elsewhere and is not subject to the fluctuations of this Earth. It's only a step in the long process of a soul, settling its accounts with the passing time and incarnations.

God enthrals the souls that recognize Him, enveloped as they are by His Love, both subtle and powerful.

They know how to recognize the distinguished Guest who dwells within them and give Him all the Love and recognition due to Him.
