Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, November 27, 2003 – 10:00 a.m.

Let your heart follow its natural inclination towards us. Do not repress any of its movements; only Love nourishes it and leads it in its exalting quest for the Absolute. Is there anything more beautiful than this path; it's a grace to be able to embark on it. What would be the meaning of a spiritual journey without Love – it's the absolute driving force. Sadhana has its own demands and requires unceasingly renewed efforts; it's the price to pay to see results. Dilettantism is not appropriate, and our faithful aspirants understand that very well. Loving their Master supports them and gives them the joy they need for this undertaking.

These recommendations will seem basic and superfluous to the most senior of our brothers and sisters, but some of them get caught up in the current of life and they neglect, out of habit, the cultivation of this fundamental notion: to love infinitely. The more they advance on the path, the more they must be refined in the perception of this rare vibration connecting them to the Divine.

Punctuality in practice is necessary, but it should on no account exclude this propensity to love, which is innate to some of our aspirants but must be acquired by others as an absolute necessity for success in this endeavour. In this case, routine is to be banished; it's good to be able to question and observe oneself, in all aspects of life. A spiritual journey is a whole; that must not be forgotten.

Blessings to all.
