Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, November 14, 1999 – 10:00 a.m.

The Medium: Forgive me, Babuji, for not being as perfect as I would like to be. I still have a long way to go to be worthy of your love.

Fortunately for you, our measures are not as you believe them to be. You have character and willpower, and you face up to things, where many would have given up; therefore, please move on to other things and smile at life.

You know what we expect of you: that you should remain valiant and that our contacts should continue for a long time yet. We still have to finish this series, and you would like to cut yourself off from everything and everyone! Do you believe this is what your entourage wishes? We know that you aspire to a certain form of retreat, but would you be able to live in great isolation? Your contacts with us and with all the beings who gravitate around you are essential to your functioning. You are not a solitary person; you need to communicate with your fellows, and even if you are very weary – believe us – it is necessary to remain in the flow of life.

Isolation is not necessarily a solution to lassitude. Regain courage; we are close to you and we surround you as much as possible.
