Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, October 24, 2004 – 10:00 a.m.

Courage is an act of faith in life, in God, for those who believe in their present and future destiny. Faith animates valiant hearts that understand their true dimension going well beyond this world. These human qualities are precious gifts preserving the essence of a being. My child, take stock of your earthly existence; doesn't what we've just mentioned constitute the positive framing of it? Think of what it would be without these two major assets. You can be thankful and continue to cultivate within yourself these gifts that give your life its true meaning. Never cease to deepen this wealth; it still holds benefits for you, the scope of which you will evaluate only after leaving this world. There your true personality will be revealed to you and you'll be able to judge what did or did not serve it throughout your journey. The law is like that: everything is out in the open. Nothing is left aside, everyone must face up to what they really are.

As the guiding principle of an incarnation is love and respect for life, it attracts opportunities favourable to the elevation of the soul. Seeking a spiritual way that can fulfill it on this point shows the determination of human beings to extricate themselves from matter, to find a more subtle nourishment, for which they feel the need.

Such is the journey of souls towards their highest destiny.
