Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, December 10, 2012 – 10:00 a.m.

The beauty of nature is an eternal wonder for an attentive person; all of creation is a perfect achievement of such great diversity. The wise person appreciates and gives thanks for what is uniquely given to them. In this regard, planet Earth is very privileged; it's not the same for all planets. Respect for nature is an act of faith and love offered to the higher powers. An incarnation here below is an opportunity for humans to diversify their action; the scope is wide, everyone tries to find their place in it and, for the most part, to do their best. It's not always easy to face up to things, to find one's way in this troubled world that's not conducive to interiorisation. A fervent heart can do it, that call is the strongest; touched by grace, what seems impossible can happen and change a person's life. Little by little, or sometimes very suddenly, light dawns within; one then discovers new facets of one's personality, and life takes on a different orientation at this level.

Everything can change when faith is great and deep in its effects. God has many resources, and the incarnate Masters use them for the good of all. Everyone receives what they should; a fervent soul attracts grace incessantly. Thus continues the cycle of incarnation through the ages; a strong and sincere call is always heard.

Trials, whether physical or moral, are elements that mark a life. They allow each person to grasp the true meaning of an incarnation where nothing is easy for anyone – but aligned with the consequences of past lives, an incarnation is an opportunity offered to everyone so that their destiny is realized.
