Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, July 15, 2002 – 10:00 a.m.

Time and again, we've come back to the same points to help you all understand how simple our teaching is.

It is not about lofty, hazy theories that make people reflect at length on their meaning before understanding them.

The way of the heart doesn't burden itself with useless detours; it is clear and luminous for those who want to see it in its simplicity.

Its effectiveness stems from this beauty, easily discovered through a joyful and confident approach. Here, there are no erudite words, no tortuous practices, and no flagellation, only a process followed scrupulously, in absolute confidence of final success.

There is no need to torture one's mind; why should sincere abhyasis do so? They have all the elements, they follow their Master with confidence; the past is abolished, and only the present and future count. They see only the completion of their spiritual quest, by making a clean sweep within – that is to say, in their heart, loving and offered for the right cause.
