Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, May 7, 2003 – 10:00 a.m.

Remain in surrender, you will be guided when the time comes for a possible change of residence.

Unite yourself more and more with the heart of your Master, who has taken such a big role in your life.

Continue to serve us in your own way, that's how you express all your love and faith in our system. These messages are important, they won't always be ignored by our brothers and sisters; many will feed on them with relish. When the time comes, they will constitute an event in our Mission. My son will know how to make appropriate choices in this regard; he has, in this as in all things, our full confidence.

He is broadly outlining the plans of a large-scale edifice, corresponding to the Mission of tomorrow. He applies himself to it on both the spiritual and the material planes, and his action will profoundly mark the structure.

Divinely inspired, he is preparing the fruitful harvest that will result. As a visionary, he knows how to make the necessary decisions. This is how a high-level Master must act, without stopping at the human, therefore limited, reactions of those around him.

We are by his side, as always. His moments of despondency don't last, the flame that burns within him propels him to planes where we can surround him with all our tenderness, and especially that which a Master can have for his chosen and dearly beloved son. He has our very special blessings, on this day when we wanted to manifest ourselves to him personally.
