Whispers from The Brighter World

Tuesday, November 24, 2015 – 10:00 a.m.

Far from the ambient noise and disharmony in this world where confusion all too often prevails, there is a realm elsewhere, where all is calmness and beauty. To search within oneself for this very special state, one in which the soul delights, is an indescribable blessing. Meditation provides for this. With a little perseverance and commitment, the abhyasi truly advances and is integrated into a system where evolution is accelerated, thus gaining precious time. Nothing should be neglected here below when dealing with this very special aspect of human nature. Beautiful and great souls reincarnate to help their fellow humans, of whom so many carry a heavy karma without the least glimpse of hope. Everything has its purpose, and trials are necessary, truly so. It's not easy to conceive of this; only surrender allows for a positive advancement that is constructive at the level of the personality.

To save time – that is the aim. Following a spiritual path facilitates sure progress, helping one to put limits where appropriate. It's not always easy to do so; for this, love and commitment towards the higher power help considerably. Everything becomes clearer, and with time, an understanding takes shape of what needs to be done to better integrate oneself in a system that is instructive and redeeming. Divine love is the true asset here below. That love does not deceive. It leads the seeker where his or her soul longs to go in order to be nourished by the divine essence. Here, everything is done accordingly, with our blessings.
