Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, July 17, 2003 – 10:00 a.m.

The star of Sahaj Marg will grow with time. Its luminosity will enlighten those who know how to discern true values, beyond the notions of power and domination over the world.

Spirituality cannot, under any circumstances, motivate violent and destructive actions that are detrimental to the true development of the human being.

People of the future will be sensitive to the effects of our system, and as they refine themselves, they will understand all its subtlety. They will be perceptive and will no longer get lost in approaches that cast doubt on their true nature.

Furthermore, they will reject institutions that dominate the world through long-standing power, and that manipulate opinions, as is the case on this planet.

Today, human beings are searching for themselves and often get lost, letting themselves be caught in the illusory nets that are also rife with everything that touches so-called spiritual development. The humans of tomorrow will be more conscious of themselves, of their true nature, and of this potential yet to be developed. They will understand that simplicity can also foster effectiveness, and they will see our path with full lucidity.

In the midst of the turmoil that will be beating down on Earth, humans will instinctively turn towards God, whom they will have neglected for so long, lost in a quest more focused on material gains and where false paradises turn out to be destructive.

May our way keep on growing and become a recourse for souls calling on divine graces and in search of a path that truly leads them to the goal.
