Beloved Master
Revered Babuji Maharaj

Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, August 14, 2004 – 10:00 a.m.

My child, don't let melancholy overwhelm you so, see what is illuminating your life and not what is afflicting it.

Think of your Master, of the greatness of his mission on this Earth, of his struggles to face up to his obligations and of the work he is achieving, not limited to this world, and to which, in some way, you are witness. As his powers develop, he is able to act at different levels of consciousness, his action is thus extended over time and space. His capabilities are numerous and not limited to any specific physical form; from a single point of the globe, motionless and focused, he can operate at the heart of worlds.

Support him in your own way, as you are doing, through active and selfless thought, where love alone is the driving force and noblest motive. Your contacts are real; though unusual and not humanly verifiable, they are nevertheless a reality that we endorse. In this area, nothing is done without valid reason; here, we are in the world of the Spirit, and it neither misleads nor acts rashly.

Don't lose heart; keep all your strength for what is essential in your eyes and, most of all, to your loving heart. To serve is your ideal, your reason for fighting. To love is your subtlest food, that which enraptures your soul, so do not deprive yourself of it, my daughter. One never loves too much, especially where such a love is concerned. We can understand that life is so heavy for you, but ignore the material side of your existence and see only that which opens doors for you to this infinite that is so fascinating, as you can imagine through the memories it leaves in you, having had a glimpse of it.

Be blessed, you as well as everyone.

Babuji