Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, January 23, 2003 – 10:00 a.m.

The mystic, it's true, can only come to this conclusion: 'all is nothing and God is all'.

By repeating this formula, you get to the heart of the matter, towards which your life is entirely turned henceforth.

Since your youth, you have been following this thread which brings you today to this result. Life has taught you much; it did not spare you and it has guided your steps thanks to this deeper longing for the Divine, which has always manifested itself in you.

What you are today results from a long search. Your finding your way and the Master intended for you could only accelerate your spiritual blooming. By taking this new course, you engaged in the most important part of your life, all that came before having only been preliminary. Thus is the progression of a soul, which always ends up coming to this determining process. The doors open, illuminating its path; new prospects are offered to it, which will be able to change its trajectory.

Our way answers the aspirations of a mystic ready to follow a true process, both pared-down and full of the many benefits it can offer. Such mystics no longer want to waste time seeking, exploring and experiencing other systems. Their intuition urges them to engage in, to go further, and to benefit from a system, which, if it is understood well and followed to the letter, cannot disappoint.

Their time is counted and precious. They think of the harvest that will result from their work, thus their hearts calm down, reassured and confident.
