Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, October 6, 2001 – 8:00 a.m.

A new day is dawning for you: your life will take a different direction. A new page of your life is before you, on which, one day, the word end will be written. Each page of the book of life is important.

Added together, they form a whole, summarizing each of your own stories.It [the story] is seldom as human beings would like it to be; they would like to make choices and select what suits them. What would be at stake in such a process! It is in the face of difficulties that humans are revealed to themselves. They are a pawn on a large chessboard, constituted by the karmic fabric that regulates human life. No one can escape it. The stories are added one after the other, and they prepare eternity. It is a long process where time does not count. Other rules govern it, decreed by divine laws that humans cannot interpret. They often wonder and cannot understand the whys and wherefores. Their views are restricted to this life, which is only a link in an immense chain connecting them to a magnificent universe – they who are so small, infinitely small, in this large swirl of energy that sweeps them away as if they were wisps of straw.

May you all become aware of your extreme smallness in the boundless greatness of creation.
