Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, September 8, 2001 – 8:00 a.m.

You prefer to be self-effacing and preserve your anonymity, but your place in Sahaj Marg will remain a special one.

You are our medium, chosen and approved, with due respect to your modesty, and your role is far from negligible. Through our exchanges and the resulting messages, we give a special teaching that will appeal to many hearts capable of understanding them. Therefore, never underestimate your work; it has a long life reserved for it, full of twists and turns, periods of dormancy and return to full light. This is how life goes, with ups and downs and the multiple twists and turns due to the dynamics of this world.

You are doing what we expect of you, and this is all that counts.

It is preferable not to enlarge the circle for the time being, for caution's sake. Well intentioned people can feel like pouring out their heart, and it is better to remain discreet. This is preferable in the climate of suspicion prevailing in France and which is likely to develop. The history of this country is full of so many and repeated excesses. They left, in the past, sad memories. Let us wait for the favourable moment before disseminating these messages more widely.

Try to keep in your heart the benefits they provide therein and share these benefits indirectly with your fellow human beings.
