Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, October 27, 2004 – 10:00 a.m.

The time will come when many of the points raised in these messages will be confirmed. To believe or not to believe is one's individual choice; we cannot force anyone to follow our various recommendations. In all circumstances, choices are to be made by those concerned, acting according to their inclinations. Free will exists; we will not challenge it. The motives of humans are varied; they have their own views of things to which they conform as a last resort. Regain stature, my daughter, come and recover strength on the summits where all is clear and simple, as long as one conforms to the existing rules. Here, all is stable; one can rely on the beings and the laws governing this great movement of life, in the face of creation in its entirety. Try to be focused on this median line capable of enlightening you and guiding you through the rest of your journey. Beware of hasty decisions; you did not accustom us to that. We can understand your reasons and if you stick to them, we will accept them.

We appreciate your courage and the rigour that has allowed you to face up to things until now, as resignation was not part of your way of being. Beyond human activities there is a place of peace and harmony that you can access. Come and meditate there and find answers to your questions. Be at peace.
