Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, August 18, 2002 – 10:00 a.m.

Lift your thoughts ever higher towards the Divine, detach yourself from this world and its trials and tribulations.

Your heart only aspires for beauty and serenity, to advance on the path of the Absolute.

Give your heart total leeway for that, offer it what it yearns for, open wide the door to the Infinite.

Don't look back, you made a choice.

Witness, deplore and pray for humanity, for all who are dear to you, and for your soul to continue to rise, thus finding its homeland.

Pray for hope, for love to reign in this world and for souls to be thirsting for the Divine.

Draw them into your wake, with the thought that Divinity resides in you, and that, through you, it draws them to follow you. Lead your struggle in the service of His greatness; each one can have theirs by surrendering to His will and serving It in whatever manner. There is no shortage of possibilities; they abound, and choices are self-evident, depending on each one's abilities.

Make sure that your life has a profound meaning; let yourselves be guided by the inner Master, this attentive and patient presence that awaits your goodwill to guide your steps, and to ensure that your life is enriching and becoming exemplary.

Advance in that state of mind, interiorizing yourselves more and more, and offering your heart to allow Him to better help you.

Be surrendered and confident. Let Him operate in you, for your greatest good.
