Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, March 31, 1999 – 8:00 a.m.

Be like a feather in the wind, let yourself be carried away without offering any resistance to our work. You are shifting to another register, it is good to comply with what we are asking. Thérèse of Lisieux spoke about soldiers and battles; this is the case, the battle of the forces of good against the forces of evil. More than ever, there is much to do on this poor Earth. Unite yourselves in prayer; each one do what is possible, and above all, do it with the heart.

You all are heading for very hard times; a destructive process is under way. Mobilize yourselves, be passive soldiers, but united, available and active with the means at your disposal. The great struggle of your favourite saint took place in the shadows, my daughter, through prayer and surrender to the Divine. She did a lot; she is known the world over.

Act as best you can; great actions are not necessarily required. This is not easy to understand, but know that you all can achieve a great deal through thought. Be united, go beyond your differences and your disagreements. Think carefully about this and do what you can.
