Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, October 16, 2002 – 10:00 a.m.

Your progression is normal, my child: you feel increasingly small, interiorized and dedicated completely to God.

All your life revolves around this notion, and you have this impression that your heart is expanding a little more each day, to lose itself in infinite love.

Your body is here, it acts in this world, but your soul has already reached the sacred shore where it revels in the fragrance of eternity!

Do not neglect these forays that are within your reach when your heart needs to bathe in absolute purity.

Don't forget that to lose yourself in Him, your revered God, is also to find yourself.

You offered your life to Him, in an impulse of love. That's all He expects of each one of His children. He is patient and knows the maze of hearts, attentive to the path they are following, and which will bring them back to Him, conquered and dazzled before His sublime Greatness!

Believe it well, each passing day gives an opportunity to get closer to Him. Whatever your life, even if it is not to your liking, it does not matter; you can serve Him and love Him. Isn't that what's essential!

Appreciate what you are given to live. What you are doing in this life with its trials, compensated by spiritual joys that are not the least, is to be offered to the Divinity in the greatest impulse of love and surrender, never ceasing to give thanks for all that is offered to you.
