Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, November 10, 2002 – 10:00 a.m.

Let your heart be consumed with love, my child; it is your noble vocation. Life, in its path, has led you to follow this way, while excluding other more futile pleasures that would not have fulfilled your soul in its aspirations.

Your trials have fostered this unfolding and triggered the process of its evolution.

Accept your life as it is; it serves your evolution in the highest manner. Let your heart go; it is opening out completely with that prospect.

Advice given to you about acceptance can only help you, you know it. This advice is not easy to implement; the essential thing is to live in this spirit, even if the advice is not put into practice to the letter.

May love keep growing in you and prevail over all else! Your heart is offered to us unreservedly, like a bouquet of many flowers, colours and scents.

Each essence is the fruit of an elaborate work in which you have given your best.

The most beautiful relationship is made of simplicity; the main thing comes down to very little: loving, above all, without trying to understand or to reason. We here are in a very different realm, in beauty and absolute purity, far from the complications of this world.

Make sure you develop these two aspects which facilitate the exchanges with subtle planes; thus are we called and finally won over by such persuasions.
