Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, February 22, 2002 – 10:00 a.m.

Be consumed with love, my child. This way is yours; it is the most beautiful. Let your mind be at rest. Tend to what is necessary but only give real importance to the targeted goal. You have reached a stage in your life where priorities must fully prevail. What you are determines your future, elsewhere. Therefore, do not neglect the present, it determines the remainder of your evolution. We insist on the fact that true mystics don't have time to fritter away. Their hearts know the requirements and they make sure not to shy away from them. Your heart should not be repressed anymore in this space that is reserved for it. It must blossom and soar, serene and detached from what is unnecessary. Let it vibrate as it pleases, happy to have broken the moorings that hindered its journey.

Life deserves living; it is full of consequences all of which should be fully utilized. It is made of many possibilities that fosters all sorts of trials. Nothing is in vain; the smallest experience has its own importance. Humans are shaped by their smallest actions.

One's thoughts, positive or negative, are to be considered with the greatest attention; they are acts. They creep in every day and must necessarily be kept under control, so that one does not fall victim to them.

You all should be vigilant in every respect.
