Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, February 7, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

Sweep away the past, a new being is emerging within you, settle all your accounts. Clear your mind of what has marked your life – nothing should slow you down any longer.

Turn this page once and for all and see what is before you, bright and cleaned of any unnecessary baggage. You wish to devote yourself to us, to the Mission. That's what you've been doing for a long time, but as we already said, everything evolves and transforms. From now on we will use your sensitivity and your gifts for more subtle purposes.

Let yourself be carried, my child; this work in the shadows suits you perfectly, even if objectively you don't grasp its full import.

That's what it means to be surrendered, to trust, to avoid questioning too much and, out of love, to let oneself be used as we see fit.

Glorious feats in broad daylight are not for you, and you cope with that very well. You are just a 'little nothing' laid on my heart, as you say, so may that 'little nothing' be blessed.
