Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, May 31, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

Your road is long and thorny. Appreciate each rough passage along the way; it's a step that leads you towards the light.

Isn't this what you asked me for, a long time ago? 'Make my heart similar to yours', you said!

Did you weigh the risks you took? Your trust in me is touching.

I believe you won't be disappointed. I did not and will not make you empty promises, as you say. You are shaping your own destiny with our assistance. The aspiration of your soul must be met. One should never rest on one's laurels. The path that leads to the Ultimate is long and without end, since the end and the beginning are abstract notions. Remain in this state of emptiness of heart, offered to divine providence, without trying to understand the how and why of divine action.

Your mind is continuously getting lost in human equations that are not compatible with 'Reality' as we see it.

Be in the greatest simplicity of heart, divested of any intellectualism in which the majority of abhyasis, who want to explain everything and give lessons, get trapped, even though they themselves have to unlearn and develop themselves according to our criteria, that escape them completely.

Be in the peace of the heart.
