Love is a state that can't be truly defined. On the human level, it is about feeling, emotion, passion; it can be sincere and deep and even excessive. You ask me to make you live a state similar to this divine love; that is not feasible. The power of its vibration would knock a human being out. As you become more and more refined, you sometimes enjoy a state approaching it. Its real force would carry you away in a whirlwind out of your envelope of flesh. Therefore you should make do with the intensely profound experience you happen to go through and which leaves you in a happy state.

You cannot run before you walk. Your subtle bodies are not ready to go near this fierce inferno in which your Masters delight. You must carry on, as you are doing, without anticipating. It is they who decide on everything for you.
