Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, July 3, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

Do not worry about what becomes of these messages; there are good people around you who will be able to manage the situation.

What concerns us is to respect the form and content, without wanting to remove anything. We repeat: correcting a French language mistake, yes, but altering them to the liking of those who will have to decide their fate would be a mistake and a lack of respect for what we wanted to convey. That is not yet the case; let's finish this 'Epilogue' and time will decide their future life.

As concerns M and J, a page is being turned, another life awaits them; they may be thanked for the work they have done with such heart. They will remember with emotion this period, which they do not really realize was so enlightening.

Life is movement, change, evolution; they have yet to complete this work, then set out in another direction. Under our benevolent gaze, they will be able to pass on all that these messages have brought to them.

With our blessings.
