Whispers from The Brighter World

Wednesday, July 12, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

Don't be overwhelmed by human misery and the suffering of your fellow beings. You should have compassion and help them as much as possible, but you can't do more than that. Thus are the karmic laws; thus will they be until the end of time.

The Earth is a place of transition and awakening. Each being must solve a personal equation, each is alone in the face of their destiny. They can receive help and see their burden becoming lighter, but their life course will be followed until the end.

A true spiritual process opens horizons to them, which can make the situation evolve favourably by modifying it. Humans have options in the face of various paths that present themselves; will they take the right direction? That's the question. They prefer, often, to choose easiness. Each one of their acts is numbered; until the end, they have free will. Will their deepest aspirations prevail? It's up to them to decide.

We wish the best for each incarnate being, and we all work in that direction.
