Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, July 13, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

It would be good if my son came to see you. That could be the start of a new relationship and would facilitate contacts that we wish between him and us through your intermediary. Speak to M and see about matching possible dates with his.

He would be happy if this plan succeeded, but we cannot force things.

My son is very tired and is doing his best. It is necessary to bring about this contact and see what can result from it; both of you are particular, and it's not easy to bring you where we want. Still, he aspires to this kind of communication; it's the human relationship between you both that is lacking and that slows down the process.

Wish this meeting ardently, invest yourself completely in this thought and see it materializing. We hope that 'the event' will take place.
