Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, August 12, 2000 – 12:00 p.m.

My son regrets not being able to come to France. The circumstances are not favourable, hence the failure of his projects.

Other opportunities will arise; all is not lost. We are working to ensure that he can achieve a certain number of things in this country while it is still possible for him to do so and given the emerging political context. Politics is an evil that is corroding the world. It causes many mistakes to be made. Whatever the political system, the extremists manage to impose their ideas by dominating their less determined peers.

A common action can be organized to defend the rights of the Mission, by avoiding isolated interventions that would give free rein to fantasy, deviating from the subject – these would not serve the good cause. This approach is to be avoided. Uniting and acting intelligently while remaining moderate and prudent is more effective. You should be wary of speech that is too sectarian, which can draw attention to the Mission in a negative way. Try to share this point of view with your friends so that they can further spread these remarks. The situation permits no error in approach.
