Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, August 10, 2000 – 8:00 a.m.

The Medium: My dear François, on this anniversary day of your departure, are you going to give me a message, or is it superfluous?

You are right, it is not superfluous, but if we meditate together, our two hearts will be united in the divine song, the one emanating from the soul when it opens up to its Beloved Creator.

In this strange and sublime world where all is harmony, we will meet again one day, more united than ever, without a false note.

Our union on Earth was successful; we respected each other as human beings. Our understanding of the other was perfect in both directions. It is essential in a couple's relationship, as well as the enhancement of the loved one, who thus finds the full blossoming of his or her personality.

This should be a main concern, a token of a great love: to ensure that the other finds happiness by being completely fulfilled.

Let's meditate together and find each other in the joy of the heart.

Fully yours,

François
