Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, August 14, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

Don't worry; you note down what we dictate to you, and yesterday we did well. If we want to succeed, we can't sugarcoat our remarks indefinitely. We will see what comes of this attempt.

You have nothing to fear; you simply put yourself at our service and his, if he decides to follow up.

That is what being of service means; in certain circumstances one should not be afraid to expose oneself. Every step you all take is an experience; being in utmost surrender facilitates this work. By all of you trying to do your best and letting yourselves be carried by a higher will, you advance more serenely. This does not preclude you all from taking up your responsibilities; you are not robots. One should strike the right balance in the process and thus live in harmony with oneself.

By advancing in wisdom, you will all obtain this result, without even realizing it, and all will be well.

Thank your collaborators, who do their work with good grace.

My Revered Master will come later. He does not forget you.
