Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, August 17, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

Difficult months lie ahead for my son. He will be affected in his deepest being and will need more and more to turn to us. We cannot spare him these ordeals, they are part of his path.

Through this means of communication, we can express all our compassion to him. His health will feel the effects; he will need a lot of love, and in these particular circumstances you will be able to show yourself to him, without your usual restraint.

My dear daughter, you see, life holds for each person some bad blows that can't be avoided. Don't forget that we were not spared. That's how it is, whatever our level. We must face up to things in all humility, while showing our acceptance and our unfailing love.

Our lives are exemplary in this sense, since they spare us no painful aspect of the fate reserved for human beings.
