Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, September 10, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

You are making progress in the spiral of light. Your subtle bodies are somewhat shaken up, and that weakens you; it is momentary.

We want the best for you and we spare you. Do you realize the progress you have made and what we have achieved together with this quantity of messages collected? But you're not amazed by anything, as usual.

Like the leaf blown by the wind, you are gliding in a world to which most of your fellow humans don't have access, and it's natural to you.

Your life is special; who is really aware of it? You should be more surrounded and cherished, but people often realize too late the real nature of certain beings.

Go on your way, my daughter, may your heart not be worried; our love carries you and haloes your tired brow.

We will not insist any further today; take rest.
