Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, September 11, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

Haven't I already told you that perfection doesn't exist in this world? Your struggles towards this state are more important in our eyes than the goal itself. They generate various states that you experience, sometimes getting out of them victoriously.

All the work you're doing to this end is bearing its fruits. Perfection granted at birth would be anachronistic here below. What would be the challenge and the reason for this incarnation? Even the missioned ones have to experience this challenge. They must face up to things and show their weaknesses in some circumstances. They are edifying for those who can understand the underlying reasons for these manifestations. They are part of an evolutionary process specific to the necessary movement of this planet. Everything must move, evolve, improve and sometimes retreat to start afresh. Life manifests itself through its incessant change. Humans cannot escape these laws.

Therefore, consider yourself an element among these fantastic mechanisms that make the world move.
