Wednesday, August 23, 2000 – 4:00 p.m.

Birth Anniversary of François

Don't despair; this problem is painful. We'll find a solution in the end to help you more effectively.

You have always been so courageous. You haven't ceased to win my admiration ever since we met. I saw you struggle so much during all those years when I lived close to you. I had a limited view of your problems and the sufferings you were enduring. I know now and I am trying, as are all those here who love you, to soften your way, but we are not as effective as we'd like to be.

It is necessary to go through terrible trials on Earth. They are initiatory and, if properly endured, they make one advance considerably. Even if that cannot console you, you have all our compassion and our love. We try to embellish your life in other ways. There is love around you. You have been doing your best for a long time to help your fellow beings, and you benefit from the return of all these finer feelings that drive you.

Being by your side has always brought me happiness. Nothing has changed, even though my presence hasn't been a physical fact for fourteen years.

You sense me in your heart and these messages testify to my ever-faithful thought. We will meet again here, that is sure. You will not be able to avoid it, unless you change your mind, which would greatly surprise me.

You have often amazed me, in a positive sense, by some aspects of your personality. But with regard to what we've just mentioned, I am at ease; there will be no surprise, the two of us will be at this ultimate appointment.

Another life will start for us, a very different one, but one that will please you, since we'll serve together under the guidance and love of your 'Beloved'.

Thank you for not forgetting this anniversary.

Yours,

François