Whispers from The Brighter World

Continue to observe yourself and make efforts so that the rough edges of your character can be smoothed out. We all went through this stage where we had to be vigilant so as not to be in contradiction with our desire for perfection.

Nothing comes easily. One has to constantly come back to one's weak points, but the results are never lacking.

I see how much your attitude toward my son is changing. You couldn't please me more; keep moving in this direction and all will be well.

There are some good initiatives emanating from the Montpellier ashram. It is good for the abhyasis to meet and reflect together on the multiple benefits of the method.

The emphasis must be on personal feeling and observation of the various states brought about by the abhyas as a whole. Each one must have the opportunity to express themselves on their approach when they feel the need. It is not about delivering speeches, but simply saying, while letting one's heart speak, what emerges from all this work.

It is a process that helps one realize the distance travelled. Everyone can benefit from it when approaching these meetings with a positive and constructive attitude.
