Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, October 16, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

My dear son, your numerous trips around the world result in very positive effects. Your influence gives the best image to Sahaj Marg, whose prerogatives are increased tenfold by a new status, and your action goes hand in hand with this.

It is necessary to counter all the intensifying hatred between certain ethnic groups, which is underlain by religious motives, impossible to reason with. Humans are killing one another for principles, even more than for territories.

What we can provide them with is healthy and pacific, but is not within the reach of all.

We're working in the best possible direction; this work, carried out in the background, brings salvation.

You are the catalyst of all this divine energy, a power granted to humans for their well-being.

We feel the yearnings of your heart, its least sighs, its expectations. Your role isn't easy, but it is productive.

You are advancing on a path that you have chosen, bearer of a torch that is nowhere close to dying out.

Continue on this upward path with peace in your heart, since you fill ours with joy.
