Whispers from The Brighter World

Tuesday, October 17, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

We come back to this strategic point that is the Middle East, mentioned in the previous message. Centuries of hatred have accumulated on this site where religious and political tendencies confront each other. Humans are suffering due to these endless conflicts that culminate in violence and murderous combat.

Will wisdom prevail one day in this territory where each could find their bearings again and try to live in peace? If it were only about delineating borders, all would be simpler and could be done in good faith, respecting the different communities. Let us pray for the anger to subside as it could generate the worst of harm.

Non-respect of the legitimate rights of others leads to the worst excesses.

On this point, you should all view your brethren's suffering without racial or religious prejudice. Know how to cultivate in your hearts love and prayer, which are the means at your disposal to see peace finally establish itself in this part of the world.
