Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, October 22, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

Don't be worried for your brother-in-heart. He's going through stages that are necessary for him. His ordeals are initiatory. All that was his life's interest has been removed from him. Will he open his eyes in time? That is the question.

Death is a beginning, as you know. When the time comes, his evolution will continue on other levels, since life here below no longer holds any interest to him. Physical decline traumatizes him very deeply and he cannot accept it.

Faith is not germinating in his heart as would be desirable, and yet this man is good.

He must climb, step-by-step, these stairs that will lead him towards other planes more suitable for a spiritual journey.

Help him with positive thoughts, full of love and hope.

Be confident in his future destiny. He's doing his best in this life with the elements in his possession.

All is still possible.

God is great.
