Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, October 23, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

It's important for you to keep up the habit of receiving us. We don't want to wear your circle out; therefore you could perhaps keep this new collection of 'Reflections' to yourself, at least for a while.

We will inevitably come back to the same weak points, once again shedding light on what risks may impede the personal progress of all of you.

It's better to become aware from now on of what needs to be perfected. If we insist so much, it is for your own good and in order to give you all the best chances of success.

When you each leave this world, it is through a magnifying glass of rare precision that you will have to observe yourselves.

The efforts you all make here will be taken into consideration and will, in this future analysis, bring considerable calming to your reactions at that time.

This is the last time we will bring up this issue; it's up to you to see.
