Whispers from The Brighter World

Tuesday, November 7, 2000 – 8:00 a.m.

It is true that a lot of abhyasis could go to India but do not do it, for the sake of convenience. They do not have enough motivation to make this effort. They want to advance, but quietly, without investing themselves in depth. For them, the notion of effort and sacrifice is not a consideration.

They put a good many other priorities before their spiritual progress. We cannot push them to do what they don't really want to do; it is sad but that's the way it is.

The time is running out for each of you; every day that passes can represent a lost opportunity to take a step in the right direction.

For some people, a spark might ignite in them, which will help them make the right decisions.

Some actions are within the reach of a good many people, but they don't take the trouble to act.

As the years go by, we find again the same people, devoted and convinced, who do their level best for what they consider to be the most important thing in life.

We encourage these brothers and sisters to continue in this direction, which will lead them to the expected results.
