Whispers from The Brighter World

Sunday, November 12, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

It is true that during the first centuries of the Christian era, contrary to what you may think, practising Christians were considered to belong to a sect and were quite frowned upon. Persecutions lasted a long time.

As you all can see, what is powerful in your time did not impose itself easily. Great religious paths, long predating Christianity, underwent the same fate.

Since the dawn of time, it has been an eternal restart. What is new is disturbing, it shakes up the established rules. But humankind evolves and turns to other currents of thought, other spiritual ways more suited to its aspirations. That is how it must be. Nothing is obtained easily. One has to accept the incomprehension and carry on.

Intolerance will always be rampant in this world. Too many differences between human beings are the cause. The many races populating the Earth get along badly with one another, each of them lacking tolerance towards the others.

Continue on the way you have chosen. You do not disturb your neighbour. Persecutions, whatever their nature, are not part of our practices.
