Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, November 18, 2000 – 10:30 a.m.

To you, my dear son, you are not alone as you proceed in these turbulences generated by the Mission. They are inevitable and have their raison d'être, regardless of the outcome. Don't lose courage. The time of rest hasn't yet come, but think of that unique joy we'll experience when we meet again. You will then be able to enjoy a well-deserved rest before going further in the mission you have set for yourself.

Don't forget the grand designs of yours that the numerous difficulties you have to face here below sometimes conceal from you. Your commitment and achievement are sublime; the word is not exaggerated.

We can recognize the least of your actions. You always act with reason and composure. Your personality has multiple facets that permit you to face seemingly insurmountable situations.

We know the numerous resources you have within you and that you know very well how to use them in all circumstances. Don't give up. Every situation, even a relatively dramatic one, has a solution.
