Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, November 20, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

We insist on the human dimension of your Master, so that you realize he doesn't advance through life exempt of all difficulties. He can only inspire further respect, since in addition to a spiritual responsibility that is out of the ordinary, he also has to face the realities of earthly life.

He is entrusted with a mission that entails a whole range of problems he must resolve.

The Mission covers countries that are very different in terms of culture and climate, which determine diametrically opposed habits.

He has to deal with these elements, which do not facilitate his task. The language difference is also a handicap to human relations.

Spiritual work overcomes these barriers, as there, all are equal.

Certain abhyasis have misconceptions about a Master's life. They imagine it is idyllic, without the least worry, and that he is carried by the love of his disciples.

The picture is not quite as rosy. It has many grey areas that aren't easy to dispel.
