Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, November 24, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

The ambient noise does not matter; internalize yourself and our contact will not be affected.

It is good for you to reach this state, whatever the circumstances. It's the best training you can have. Your channelling capacities are important, but they need to be maintained.

You don't like your character to be put to the fore, and yet you are not a machine. It is normal to take stock from time to time, to enlighten readers about this means of communication.

Do your practice well, don't neglect any aspect of it. It's the best way to prepare for our contacts. They are important for you, and so is what results from them.

We must spare the channel and make sure it continues to assume its role as long as possible. It's not desirable that you keep this message to yourself. Stop thinking that what concerns you is uninteresting. This modesty does you credit, but here again, it is necessary to review your position. You finally succeeded in not doubting yourself, so make an effort at what we've just mentioned and all will be well.
