Whispers from The Brighter World

Saturday, December 2, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

The human body suffers from all kinds of ailments. Vibratory imbalances are most often to blame. They can stem from a multiplicity of factors: weakness of constitution predisposing humans to these disturbances, planetary influences, various types of pollution and geomagnetic disruptions all contribute to these internal turbulences.

Consequently, the psyche can be affected. It is too often blamed, though it is not responsible – that is the easy way out. One dwells on the manifestation, without really being able to identify it, and not on the real cause. The interpretation is often incorrect, and inappropriate treatments sometimes accentuate the problems rather than resolving them.

Official medicine will have to open up to research that is foreign to it. It will have to reconsider human beings in their vibratory environment, which depends entirely on these surrounding magnetic fields capable of disrupting the cellular environment.

The whole approach should be reviewed, it is an area that is poorly explored at present and will lead in the future to broad avenues of research.
