Whispers from The Brighter World

Thursday, December 21, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

Continue to advance every day as you do. Detach yourself as much as possible from what is useless. Do not try to understand what will happen tomorrow and why we do not outline more clearly what we expect from you. There too, things happen naturally, at their own pace. Surrender has always worked for you; live intensely the present moment, it is fleeting. Life flies by swiftly and there is no going back.

What is not done is lost, so focus on the work you are doing for us, with all the strength of your love.

It shines through these lines, your energy runs through them. You string together words that touch your soul and will touch others after you.

That is the reason for this endless work which we ask you to do.

It is carried out in the best possible state of heart.

We have nothing else to say on the subject. The readers of these messages can trust you; they are the pure reflection of our thought.
