Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, December 29, 2000 – 10:00 a.m.

The Atlantean civilization was very advanced, much more than yours. When it was engulfed, vast expanses of land were dislocated to become continents as you all know them currently. This planet underwent very many upheavals before getting into its current configuration.

Some more upheavals will take place; it's inevitable. It is part of the great movement that drives the structure of the universe to which is added, as far as the Earth is concerned, the incredible contempt with which humans, with a destructive spirit, treat elements that make it up. They are not unaware of the dangers they pose to humanity, but they continue to move forward in that race for power, primarily their own power, subordinated to the power of money.

Others put their intelligence and action at the service of their brothers and sisters, and thus the balance of values tentatively takes place.

We leave you all with this topic to think about at this year-end, when the prospects for peace in certain parts of the world do not look exactly cheerful.

As for you all, cultivate in your hearts this powerful force that is love, to counterbalance the forces of evil.
