Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, January 1, 2001 – 8:30 a.m.

May peace reign finally on this Earth; that is the wish we make for human beings living there. Their cries, their prayers and their sorrowful songs rise up to us. We constantly turn towards them with love and compassion.

May the light come to light up souls. May love come to carry hearts and lead them towards deliverance. May they finally be freed from their chains.

Can you understand this speech? Do any of you have any idea of the misery that prevails here below, and of what happens in some countries? You are the privileged people of this earth. There are poor, and other beings, that suffer around all of you. So open your eyes, would you? Inquire about what is happening in many places of the world and you will all give thanks for living where you do. Your living conditions are relatively satisfactory.

Hunger, fear and torture rage in some parts of the Earth. You can't imagine the sufferings that exist in this world. So, pray! Pray every day for your deprived brothers and sisters who lack even faith and hope for better times.
