Whispers from The Brighter World

Friday, January 5, 2001 – 10:00 a.m.

With regard to his successor, my son still has to wait for our projects to materialize. Let him not be impatient, even if he is no longer, as he says, the 'lion of old.' For the time being, he alone is capable of managing the situation.

His experience and his ability cannot solve everything – who could do so? The stupidity of humans is without limit. We act for the best interests of the Mission. May he be at peace, we shall address him soon. Your desire to satisfy him is laudable, my daughter, but we do not solve problems on the basis of appearances and the laws governing this world. All these mechanisms are of great complexity. Nothing relating to human behaviour is simple. This year will be beneficial for the Mission. It will see structures put in place that will play a decisive role in the future.

My son's hopes will not be disappointed, even though, while on this Earth, he cannot really imagine what our path will have built for humans of times to come. He will have been the Master who, thanks to his grandiose contribution, will have laid the most significant foundation stones of the edifice.
