Friday, January 12, 2001 – 10:00 a.m.

You can take inspiration from this woman who wasn't afraid to express herself throughout her writings, addressing herself to Jesus in the language of her heart and writing it down without fear of those ready to criticize.

You can also recognize yourself in her – often doubting the messages she received, right up until the end, despite the exhortations of her guide.

They were discretely approved by the Church, their principal representative having given his blessing, which allowed the subsequent publication of these books.*

There are precedents, even in a religion that regards channelling as diabolic, but is prepared to make an exception when it serves its cause. Cases such as this are not rare. The sacred writings that have left their mark on humanity were written through this form of inspiration.

It's time to stop ignoring it and consider the possibility, for certain privileged beings, of communicating with higher spirits.

Why wouldn't our exchanges too be recognized on a large scale in the future?

We had to remind you of the existence of these books so that you become aware of the similarity of your cases and of this person's state of mind, resulting from the exceptional experience she was given to live through.

In these particular circumstances, only surrender and humility make it possible to manage the situation appropriately.

Babuji

* Thoughts and Reflections: Messages of Jesus, Volumes I and II.