Whispers from The Brighter World

Having this reference to 'Thoughts and Reflections of Jesus' is more important than you think. There are many Christians in Sahaj Marg who, although they have sought another path, remain very deeply marked by this religion. The Master Jesus said, 'What I have done, you too can do.'* By extension, can't these words be applied to the present situation?

We must find sound arguments to ensure that the publication of these messages is accepted. They will raise unfavourable reactions; there will be those for and those against, that is inevitable.

We care about their future life. You, the privileged people who have access to them, if you yourselves are appropriately nourished by them, you are well placed to testify to their importance. It will rest with you to do it with faith without taking account of the hostile reactions. Publishing those two books raised controversies in the Episcopal world, but reason prevailed. In due time, my son will be the judge, as ultimately was the opinion of the Pope for the collections mentioned.

With humans nothing is ever simple, we are trying to pave the way for this project which is close to our hearts.
