Whispers from The Brighter World

Monday, January 15, 2001 – 8:00 a.m.

These statistical results are impressive. More than a thousand messages have been received so far, which represent a lot of work. The team is up and running and it seems that this can last indefinitely. We will continue for a while and then move on to something else.

The harvest is good. Each one can recognize themselves in these very diverse remarks and be nourished by this special teaching, according to the aspirations of their soul. A reader's interest in these writings is proportional to both their open-mindedness and a real need to quench their spiritual thirst; it is a question of personal sensitivity. The messages exist and life will take possession of them at its convenience.

They are carriers of a word both simple and accessible to all. In the future, a fervent desire to return to our sources will be experienced.

The need for a truth stripped of superfluities will be very deeply felt. Humankind, hard-pressed in the face of the harshness of the times, will turn to its Creator, imploring the help of grace.

Our way will be part of the means offered to humans to enable them to find their true identity, their unique and profound bond with Divinity.
